First-Plymouth Church

First-Plymouth strives to blend tradition and innovation, the historical and the contemporary. Their worship services have a quality that echoes through the ages and yet, speaks to the present and points to the future. Their religious life is shaped by five guiding principles: They are Christian, open-minded, spiritual, evolving, and diverse.

First-Plymouth Congregational Church is a merger of two congregations. On the morning of Sunday, August 19, 1866, First Congregational Church was organized in what was then known as Lancaster, Nebraska. It was and is the first church congregation to be organized in the town. One year later, the name of the town was changed to Lincoln.

In designing the building, the architects drew upon the architecture of early basilica churches and Greek forum. However, they wanted the architecture to reflect the people and environs of Nebraska, and thus, a building that would add beauty to Lincoln was built. Electronic Contracting Company installed systems for First-Plymouth's Chapel, Youth Room, and Mayflower Hall.
